

Landmines

The Burmese Army and militia place landmines in villages and rice fields they have declared "guerrilla zones", and to block jungle paths used by villagers to escape to refugee camps in Thailand. Villagers who survive treading on a landmine must pay a fine and pay for the cost of a replacement landmine.

Landmines (left) and a landmine survivor (above).

Photos: Karen Human Rights Group